

Finn's Big World of Trade

Join Finn the Dolphin on a journey across the sea to see how the world shares what it grows and makes!

- Trade happens when we give something to someone else and get something new in return.
- We use coins and notes, like £1 or £2, to pay for the things we need at the shop.
- Ships, lorries, and planes carry items across the world so they can reach our local markets.
- Some places grow yummy fruit that cannot grow in our country, so we trade to bring it here.
- Every time you buy a toy or a snack with your pocket money, you are taking part in trade!

Did you know? Did you know? Before we had coins and notes, people used to trade things they had for things they wanted! A farmer might swap a basket of shiny red apples for a cosy woollen jumper made by a neighbour.
