

Finn's Amazing South American Expedition

Grab your map and compass—let's dive into the wonders of South America with Finn the Dolphin!

- South America is a vast continent located mostly in the Southern Hemisphere, bordered by the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans.
- The Andes is the longest continental mountain range in the world, running all the way down the western side of the continent.
- The Amazon Rainforest is the largest tropical rainforest on Earth and is home to millions of different species of plants and animals.
- The Equator passes through the northern part of South America, meaning some countries there have a tropical climate all year round.
- There are twelve independent countries in South America, including Brazil, Argentina, Chile, and Peru.
- The Atacama Desert in Chile is known as one of the driest places on the entire planet!

Did you know? Did you know that the Amazon River contains more water than any other river in the world? It stretches so far that it flows through three different countries: Peru, Colombia, and Brazil!

Key vocabulary: Continent · Equator · Amazon Rainforest · Andes Mountains · Hemisphere · Biodiversity