- Christians believe in the concept of Heaven, a place of peace and joy where the soul goes to be with God after life on Earth.
- In Hinduism and Buddhism, many people believe in reincarnation, which is the idea that the soul is reborn into a new life after death.
- Muslims believe that life on Earth is a test, and after death, people will be judged by Allah and may enter Jannah, or Paradise.
- Humanists, who do not follow a specific religion, often focus on the importance of the life we live now and the positive legacy we leave behind for others.
- Sikhs believe that life is a journey towards God, and through good deeds and meditation, the soul can be reunited with the Creator.
- Across many different beliefs, the common thread is the idea that love and memories continue to exist even after a person has died.

Did you know? Did you know? Many cultures and religions around the world celebrate the memory of loved ones in unique ways, such as the Day of the Dead in Mexico, where families share stories and favorite foods to honor those who have passed away.
