

Celebrating Black History: Voices That Shaped Our World

Be curious, be inspired, and let history fuel your future!

- Black History Month is an opportunity to recognise the vital contributions that Black people have made to science, literature, the arts, and the movement for civil rights.
- Mary Seacole, a Jamaican-Scottish nurse, showed immense bravery during the Crimean War by setting up the 'British Hotel' to care for wounded soldiers.
- Walter Tull, a professional footballer and the first Black officer to lead white British troops into battle in the First World War, is remembered for his courage and leadership.
- In the world of music and literature, figures like Samuel Coleridge-Taylor and Olaudah Equiano have left a lasting legacy that continues to influence British culture today.
- Learning about history helps us understand the importance of equality, diversity, and the shared humanity that connects us all across the globe.
- Every October, schools and communities across the UK host events to celebrate these stories, ensuring that the achievements of the past are never forgotten.

Did you know? Did you know? Black History Month was first celebrated in the UK in 1987. It was organised by Akyaaba Addai-Sebo, a Ghanaian analyst, who wanted to create a time for all people to learn about the untold stories and achievements of Black people throughout history.
