

Mastering the Non-Chronological Report

Become a Fact-Finding Explorer with Pip and Kit: Uncover the World, One Report at a Time!

- How do sub-headings assist the reader in navigating the report's information?
- Why is it essential to maintain a formal, objective tone when presenting facts?
- What is the purpose of using organisational devices such as bullet points or bold text?
- Why must a non-chronological report be written in the present tense?
- How does the use of technical vocabulary enhance the credibility of your report?
- Why is it important to group related information under specific categories?

Did you know? Did you know? A non-chronological report does not have to be read from start to finish like a story! Because the information is grouped by topic rather than time, you can dive straight into the section that interests you most to find the specific facts you need.

Key vocabulary: Sub-headings · Third-person perspective · Present tense · Technical vocabulary · Categorisation · Formal tone · Fact-based · Organisational devices
