

A World of Adventure: World Book Day Reflection

Learning objective: To write a persuasive and reflective recount about the significance of reading and the celebration of World Book Day.

Use this scaffold to structure your piece. Ensure you use sophisticated vocabulary and varied sentence structures to engage your reader. Consider how Pip the Bookworm would describe the magic of a new story.

As the morning sun filtered through the library windows, Pip the Bookworm adjusted his glasses, ready to begin the most highly anticipated celebration of the literary year: World Book Day.

Word bank: Furthermore · Consequently · In addition to · Captivating · Enthralling · Perspective · Literary journey · Evocative · Nevertheless · Immersive

1. Introduction: Why is reading essential for developing our imagination? Start by... (2 marks)

2. The Celebration: Describe your favourite literary character and explain why they resonate with you. Use the phrase... (3 marks)

3. Critical Reflection: Compare and contrast reading a physical book with listening to an audiobook. Justify your preference by... (4 marks)

4. The Impact: Explain why it is important for schools to dedicate time to celebrate authors and stories. Consider... (3 marks)

5. Future Vision: What might happen if we stopped reading books altogether? Write a concluding paragraph that... (4 marks)

6. Creative Extension: If you were to write a sequel to a story you have read, what genre would it be and why? Defend your choice by... (4 marks)

Extension challenge: Challenge: Write a persuasive letter to your headteacher proposing an innovative way to make World Book Day even more immersive for the whole school. Use at least three examples of modal verbs and fronted adverbials to strengthen your argument.