Mastering Non-Chronological Reports with Max and Ellie

Explore the World of Facts: Report Writing Experts!

- Non-chronological reports are written in the third person, using words like 'it', 'they', or 'he' instead of 'I' or 'we'.
- Use sub-headings to organise your information into clear sections so the reader can find facts easily.
- Always write in the present tense because facts about the world are usually true right now.
- Include a glossary at the end to explain any tricky technical vocabulary to your reader.
- Add pictures, diagrams, or maps to help the reader visualise the information you are explaining.

> Did you know? Did you know? Non-chronological reports do not follow a specific timeline, which is why they are perfect for describing animals, planets, or historical periods in detail without needing to tell a story in order!
