

Celebrating Black History Month: Honouring Contributions and Culture

Step into the spotlight: Celebrate, reflect, and learn about the diverse voices that have shaped our world!

- Black History Month encourages us to recognise the significant achievements of Black scientists, authors, and leaders who have helped shape the modern world.
- Celebrating diversity helps us build a more inclusive society where every person's story is valued and respected.
- History is not just about the past; it is about learning from those who showed great resilience and courage to create positive change for future generations.
- By exploring local and national history, we can discover hidden stories about how Black communities have enriched British culture through music, art, and innovation.
- Ellie the elephant reminds us that history is a collection of memories; sharing these stories ensures we never forget the lessons we have learned along the way.

Did you know? Did you know? Black History Month was first celebrated in the UK in 1987. It was organised by Ghanaian analyst Akyaaba Addai-Sebo, who wanted to create a dedicated time for people to learn about the history and achievements of Black people that were often missing from standard history books.
