On the fifth of November, the crisp autumn air was filled with excitement. Leo the Lion sat on a wooden bench, wrapped in a thick, woolly scarf. Above him, the night sky transformed into a giant canvas of colour. A rocket soared upwards, leaving a trail of shimmering stardust before exploding into a dazzling display of golden sparks. Leo listened carefully to the rhythmic crackling of the bonfire nearby. The vibrant flames danced and twisted, casting a gentle glow on the faces of his friends. It was a spectacular sight that made the dark night feel alive with magic.
