- The United Kingdom is divided into regions based on both physical features, like mountains and rivers, and human features, like towns and motorways.
- Northern Ireland is separated from the island of Great Britain by the Irish Sea, which has shaped its unique local trade and culture.
- The South East of England is one of the most densely populated regions, containing many large urban centres and vital transport links.
- Wales is famous for its dramatic, mountainous terrain, particularly in the Snowdonia region, which influences the local climate and land use.
- Scotland's geography is split between the Highlands, known for their wild beauty, and the Lowlands, where the majority of the population lives.

Did you know? Did you know? The United Kingdom is made up of four distinct countries: England, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland. Each has its own unique landscape, from the rugged, mountainous peaks of the Scottish Highlands to the rolling green hills and bustling, historic cities found across England and Wales.
